Method. This is an integrative review, due to the convenience of analysis of the literature regarding the completed studies, to identify tools used for pain assessment in newborns.

Pain assessment scales in newborns: integrative review

Pain in babies, and whether babies feel pain, has been a large subject of debate within the medical profession for centuries. Prior to the late nineteenth century it was generally considered that babies hurt more easily than adults. It was only in the last quarter of the 20th century that scientific techniques finally established babies definitely do experience pain – probably more than ...

Your baby is becoming more aware of different people around him. He'll use his sense of smell as a way of telling the difference between the people he knows and strangers. If he feels scared or threatened by a person's smell, he may cry or kick his legs (Gordon 2002). Six months When your baby is weaned on to solid food, he'll use his senses of smell and taste to decide whether or not he ...
