Search engines are answer machines. When a person performs an online search, the search engine scours its corpus of billions of documents and does two things: first, it returns only those results that are relevant or useful to the searcher's query; second, it ranks those results according to the popularity of the websites serving the information.

Imagine the World Wide Web as a network of stops in a big â€” Oftentimes certain directories and search engines will either be biased toward local sites or only let local sites in the index. â€” Localâ€” may mean ending
